

Scott House

Scott House is named after one of the school's former headmasters - Charles Russell Scott (1898 - 1979).

The House opened its doors in 1962 and was originally intended for the younger boys in the school (11-13). Girls were later permitted to attend Cranbrook and in 1973 Scott became the first girls' boarding house.

Scott's motto is: "To provide a homely environment to enable all Scott girls to feel valued and supported in whatever they do".

The accommodation at Scott is all on one level which helps to integrate the girls. The House has a number of well-equipped communal areas, including a large common room which is primarily where the juniors watch TV. There is also a junior kitchen which has full cooking facilities and has recently been refurbished.

Year 9 sleep in two large dorms. Year 10 and Year 11 have twin bed studios. In the Sixth Form, the vast majority of students have single bed study rooms. Scott accommodates 47 girls in total.

There are a number of social events which foster friendships and help build House spirit. These include the House Halloween Party, trips to the theatre, restaurant outings, House BBQs, the Scott Ball in May, the House play in the autumn term, the annual House Shout singing festival and the termly inter-House sporting competitions. At the end of the year, to round off the summer term, there is an annual leavers' party.
